

Health Care Professionals Legal Advocacy Network

Since the mid-1990s, the ADA has brought together advocates, lawyers, and health care professionals to fight discrimination. These volunteers help students who are not receiving diabetes accommodations at school, workers denied jobs because of their diabetes, and incarcerated people who don't have even basic diabetes care.

We need your help to end discrimination against people with diabetes. Help us educate others about this disease—negotiate appropriate diabetes care and accommodations, litigate to protect the rights of people with diabetes, and legislate to ensure that people with diabetes are protected from discrimination.
