MANCHESTER, N.H. — A bill that could cap insulin at $35 per month is moving forward in Congress.

The INSULIN Act moved out of a key Senate committee Wednesday.

According to a recent poll by the American Diabetes Association, nearly half of those surveyed reported paying more than $150 per month for insulin.

Molly Tarbell was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes five years ago. She said she pays more than $100 for her insulin.

"Having that capped, I know for myself, for several friends that have Type 1 diabetes, it would just be huge," she said. "It would be less of a burden than we're already dealing with daily."

U.S. Sen. Jeanne Shaheen, D-New Hampshire, is the main sponsor of the bill, along with 28 other cosponsors.
